West Sac man dies suddenly while working as officer

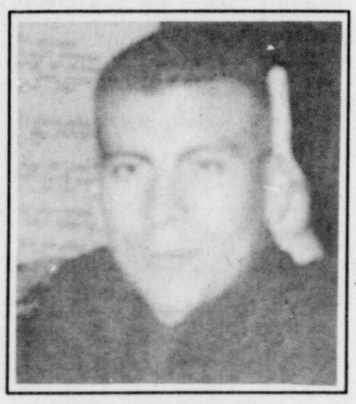
By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

A well-liked, 24-year old West Sacramento man died last week while serving on duty at his new job as a Sacramento police officer. The death was apparently due to natural causes – possibly an aneurism.

Joseph Chairez, a 1995 graduate of River City High School, was fulfilling his dream by joining the Sacramento Police Dept. as a sworn officer about a half-year ago, said family friend Bob Dutra of West Sacramento. Dutra said that Chairez was the godfather of Dutra's child, and that the two families considered themselves almost as one.

"He was one of the all-around best kids you could have ever met," said Dutra of Chairez. "You don't often see someone who has a dream and gets to live it. It's really rare to see somebody who achieves their dream and is 100 percent happy. But he was one. And he had no enemies – everyone liked him."

Dutra said Chairez planned on becoming an officer from an early age, working as a police volunteer to "get his foot in the door" until he graduated from the police academy and joined the force. While at River City High, he had been elected class president.



JOSEPH CHAIREZ

Chairez was engaged to marry Rebecca Cisneros next year.

The Sacramento Bee reports that Chairez apparently collapsed while his partner was talking to a couple of subjects while on patrol.

Services are planned at the Cathedral of the Blessed Sacramento, 11th and K streets in Sacramento, this week. A Rosary will be recited Thursday at 7 p.m., and a Mass of Christian Burial will be offered Friday at 10 a.m., with interment later Friday.

Besides his fiancee, Chairez is survived by parents Jess Sr. and Theresa Chairez of West Sacramento; and by brothers John and Jeff.

It's Mayor Montemayor

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Having voluntarily postponed the honor a year, Mark Montemayor is now mayor of West Sacramento.

The gavel was passed by outgoing mayor Christopher Cabaldon (who will remain on the city council) at a special meeting Monday evening.

"I would be pleased to nominate the very best trained person to fill your very big shoes, and that would be Mark Montemayor," said city council member Jim Cahill to then-mayor Cabaldon as the issue was brought up.

Council members Bill Kristoff and Montemayor joined them in approving the appointment with no dissension. Retiring council member Greg Potnick was not at the meeting, and new member Oscar Villegas was not sworn in to take his seat until a few minutes later.

"I'm a little bit overwhelmed by the support I received from the council this evening," commented Montemayor upon embracing Cabaldon and switching to the mayor's seat at city hall. "It's very humbling to be sitting in this chair. The mayor (Cabaldon) has been an extraordinarily effective mayor. He has made a difference we only dreamed of two years ago."

Cabaldon's colleagues on the council joined in praising him for his two consecutive terms of service as mayor. Cabaldon himself looked back on the two years warmly, giving credit to the council and to city staff..

"What we learned over the past couple of years is that wonderful things can happen in this city," he said. "When we take the risk of failing miserably, great things can be achieved."

Montemayor, a year ago, declined a nomination to be mayor in order to allow Cabaldon his second term – feeling that the city needed some continuity as it struggled with trying to bring a baseball stadium to town.

After his appointment to the mayor's seat Monday, he opened up the floor for nominations to the "mayor pro tem," or vice mayor's position.

Following a lengthy pause, he nominated Kristoff – who also was approved with a unanimous vote.

Two arrests at police checkpoint Saturday

The West Sacramento Police Dept. conducted a DUI/Driver's License checkpoint on Saturday evening on westbound Sacramento Ave. near Simon Terrace.

A total of 346 vehicles drove through the checkpoint, and 54 drivers were directed to a staging area for license or sobriety checks. Two field sobriety tests were performed, with no DUI arrests. 11 vehicles were impounded for suspended or unlicensed drivers.

Cabaldon named to water quality board

The office of Governor Gray Davis has announced the appointment of West Sacramento city council member Christopher Cabaldon to the California Regional Water Quality Control Board, Central Valley Region.

Cabaldon, 35, is vice chancellor of the California Community College system, and has just ended two one-year terms as West Sacramento's mayor. He and three others will join the 29-seat board, pending state senate approval. Board members serve part-time without pay.

The board deals with water quality plans and standards.

In the early 1990s, the board fined West Sacramento several hundred thousand dollars for sewage treatment plant violations. It is also the agency that issues sewage treatment plant permits – one of which West Sacramento could soon be seeking to serve a growing city.

But Cabaldon explained Monday that his appointment would not affect "issues specific to West Sacramento," as he would have to recuse himself from decisions on these issues.

Roads & traffic are top concerns—

New council member Villegas hopes to push neighborhood concerns

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Lifelong resident Oscar Villegas is the only newcomer to West Sacramento's city council, taking his seat two days ago at a special council meeting.

Villegas said he has a lot to try to accomplish in his new, four-year term.

"I want to work really closely with the schools," Villegas told the News-Ledger. "There are good, positive things we can do with after-school programs, for example. I want to work closely with the rest of the council on the bad road conditions that exist in our old neighborhoods. I also want to go after good retail opportunities, getting them established in our towns. People want to shop locally."

Villegas added that he also hopes to work on a concern he heard over and over again from local people, as he knocked on their doors during the city council campaign.

"We need to find a way to slow down traffic in residential neighborhoods," commented Villegas. "That's something I heard many times during the campaign."

The new council member joins Mayor Mark Montemayor, vice mayor Bill Kristoff, and council members Jim Cahill and Christopher Cabaldon – all of whom have at least two years of experience working on the council. Pushing his own agenda is something that needs to be handled "delicately," said Villegas.

"I think I have a good repoire with all four existing council members," he commented. "I'm going to live and learn as I work with them, and find the formal and informal procedures that transpire to get consensus and get things accomplished."

Villegas, a family man who has lived in several different neighborhoods in West Sacramento, works as an administrator for the state's drug court program.

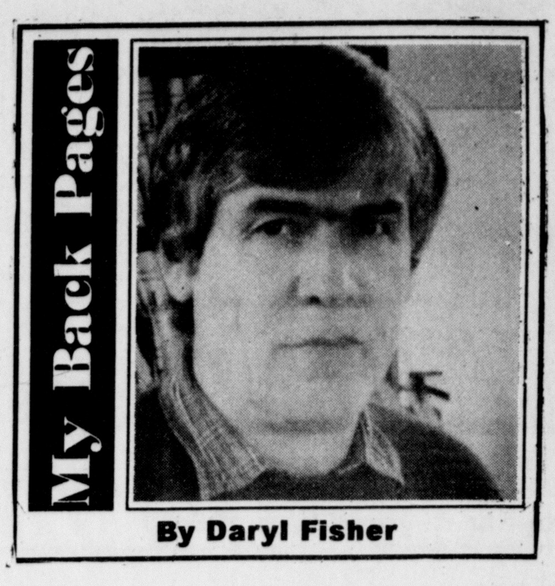
Some of those old 'home remedies' almost killed me



By Daryl Fisher

(Note: Having recently come down with my first cold in more than two years, I was reminded of the following column, which first appeared in the News-Ledger almost a decade ago.)

Last week, while driving along Park Boulevard on my way back to work, I spotted Dr. Gaing Chan pulling out from one of that street's cul-de-sacs. I hadn't seen him in years, and I didn't bother to honk because I was sure he wouldn't remember me.

For numerous West Sacramentans (especially those around my age), Dr. Chan was our childhood physician. Back then he worked out of an office on Park Boulevard (where I think he lived for awhile, too), and to my knowledge, he was also one of the last doctors in history to actually make home visits. I remember him as an extremely kind and competent man whom my parents trusted implicitly. But much more important than that, he mercifully brought modern medical practices to my mother's attention.

First, a little history. My mother grew up in the middle of the Great Depression in a place called Ava, Missouri, a small farming community where money was scarce and the highlight of the week was riding a horse-drawn wagon into town to purchase five loaves of store-bought white bread for twenty-five cents. The very last thing her parents would waste their hard-earned money on was a doctor, and when she or her brother or sister got sick, her mother (my Granny) turned to a fascinating assortment of home remedies.

For instance, if you had a sore throat, Granny would heat up some turpentine and Vicks and generously apply it all over your neck. Then she would tightly wrap a thick, fatty slice of bacon around that concoction, followed by a wide strip of heavy flannel to keep everything in place. Smelling to high heaven, my mother would then be marched off to school with the warning that she would be in big trouble if she took it off before she returned home.

If, God forbid, you should develop a bad cough, Granny would mix some sugar in a teaspoon of water and then very carefully add three drops of kerosene to it. This deadly mixture had to be gulped down while you held your breath because the fumes could actually choke you if you weren't careful.

Another of Granny's favorites was the infamous mustard plaster. This little beauty she passed on to my mother, and it was supposed to help cure a chest cold. What they did was mix up a bunch of dry mustard with some warm water. This goop was then liberally spread out all over my chest. Within minutes, my whole torso felt like you could roast marshmallows over it.

"The longer you leave it on," explained my mother between my screams and begging her to wipe it off, "the more good it will do you."

If you had a cut or any skin disorder, then Dr. Saymon's foul-smelling salve was quickly applied to the problem area.

Dr. Sloan's liniment (which my mother said actually smelled like the same thing the local vets used on horses) was used for rheumatism and other lower back problems. One had to take extra care, though, to make sure this particular substance never touched any body openings. Family rumors have it that Granny was once using this awful stuff on my father when he was a young man and some of it accidentally slipped down his exposed backside. I'm told his screams could be heard all the way into the next county.

Granny also firmly believed that if you just didn't feel up to par, but couldn't quite put your finger on the problem, then you needed a laxative. "Give him a dose of salts!" was the way she put it, which meant a glass or so of liquid Epsom salts, which definitely cleaned your entire system out. And in a hurry, too.

If you had an upset stomach, then Granny would immediately boil up a pot of sassafras roots and make you a cup of hot sassafras tea. Actually, this was one of Granny's few home remedies which didn't taste or smell like death itself.

Different kinds of greases were also real popular with Granny. She used goose grease for just about everything, but my mom tells me bacon grease was her favorite for mosquito, tick, and chigger bites. (What in the world is a chigger?)

Anyway, when I was growing up, my mother still believed in quite a few of Granny's old home remedies, and to this day, she is eager to rub Ben Gay (I hate that smell!) or Frankie Avalon's Zero Pain ointment on her grandchildren if she thinks they need it.

She also still keeps a bottle of Vicks at the ready, which quickly brings back memories of childhood suffocation the moment I smell it. You see, when I was young, every time I got a stuffy nose, she would shove a generous amount of it up both my nostrils. The belief, as I understood it, was that the Vicks would make it easier to breathe. In reality, the little air I could get through my nose in the first place was immediately cut off by the globs of Vicks she had inserted.

After Dr. Chan mercifully arrived on the scene with penicillin and other miracle medical treatments like that, Mom eased up a little and one by one, Granny's old home remedies began to disappear. I was kidding her the other day about all this when she suddenly said with conviction, "You know, young man, there's just one little thing you're forgetting."

"What's that, Mom?" I asked like a good son.

"Thanks to all those home remedies, you were always as healthy as a horse!"

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The Oakland Raiders (10-2) took another step closer to qualifying for NFL Playoffs, which they haven't done since 1993 when they played in Los Angeles. The leagues best 10-2 record puts the Raiders in the drivers seat for home-field advantage throughout the playoffs. Miami and Tennessee are both 9-3 and trail the Raiders by one game in the race to Super Bowl XXXV in Tampa Bay.

The Raiders hard playing defense knocked out another quarterback (Chris Chandler) in their 41-14 rout of the hapless Atlanta Falcons. The Raiders ended Saints quarterback Jeff Blake's season last week with sack that broke his foot and the Raiders also KO'd the Bronco's (Brian Griese) QB. The Raiders running attack rolled over the NFC West doormats for 270 yards not counting Rich Gannon's 64 yards. Good news for Raiders fans! The Raiders ticket office started selling playoffs tickets ($55 to $90) to their season ticket holders. Tickets will also be available at all BASS Outlets. The Silver & Black attack head east next Sunday (10 a.m.-ch.13) to battle the Pittsburgh Steelers (+3).

The 49ers (4-8) enjoyed their bye week to heal up some players as they prepare to travel to San Diego (1-10) for a hard hitting affair with Junior Seau and the Chargers. The Niners are lucky the Chargers won't be so hungry after they won their first game of the season last Sunday with a last second 52-yard field goal against the Chiefs. The 49ers (+3) better watch out for Chargers who will be trying to put together their first winning streak of the season.

In week 13, I lost the Redskins (-5) game and tied with the Jets (-7) 17-10 win over the Bears but I continue to win my Monday night picks with the Panthers beating up on the Packers 31-14. My weekly 3 picks now stand at 19 wins, 17 losses, and 3 ties. This week no game really stands out but I must pick someone! So, I'll take the Raiders (+3) over the Steelers and the Saints at home in a pick'em over the Broncos. On Monday night the Patriots (NL) will win at home against the out of playoff contention Chiefs.

The Sacramento Kings (9-3) will be playing in Texas this week against Houston and San Antonio before they return home to host the division leading Suns on Friday, Dec. 1st. The Kings 125-101 blow out the Sonics last Saturday had some rippling effects this week with the firing of head coach
Paul Westphal. The Sonics (6-9) replaced Westphal with former Sonics guard Nate McMillan. Kings rookie first round pick, Hedo Turkoglu, took advantage of his first real minutes in a Kings uniform to impress the sold-out crowd with 17 points, 12 rebounds and all in 17 minutes of the fourth quarter of the Kings victory over the Sonics. Single game tickets are still available at the Kings Box Office for the Friday night showdown with Phoenix and for the December 5th game against the "Twin Towers" and the San Antonio Spurs.

Boxing fans will be treated to another Pay-for-View (TVKO) event on Saturday, Dec. 2nd (6:00 p.m.) featuring two undefeated champions, Felix Trinidad (38-0, 31 KO's) against Fernando Vargas (20-0, 18 KO's). With the WBA Super Welterweight and IBF Junior Middleweight titles are on the line expect a barnburner with Trinidad's experience prevailing over the young and dangerous Vargas. Trinidad is a slow starter so Vargas may go for the knockout early!

See ya next week!

Art exhibit features often-somber works of late area artist

From Betty Fairbairn Sokolich

A fascinating retrospective exhibit of the very talented artist, Sheila Sullivan's paintings, drawings and etchings is now on exhibit at West Sacramento's Turner Library until the end of December, 2000. The art work can be seen any time during regular library hours.

Sheila Sullivan was born in Germany and lived in Rancho Cordova most of her life before her untimely death from leukemia at the age of 35. When she graduated from St. Francis High School she was already the recipient of numerous awards for her art work so her four year scholarship to the College of Arts and Craft in Oakland was no surprise to those familiar with her talent and dedication to art. In 1975, she won a two year Fullbright Fellowship to study lithography in Hamburg, Germany.

Sullivan's art work reflected her experiences so at times her paintings and etchings became somber, foreboding and black. She was expressing the dark side of life with dreamlike, surreal and haunting compositions. Her skill, creativity and imagination gave the work a universal appeal though the colors were dark and the symbols so personal they were often difficult to decipher. Her visual perception was so keen she could simplify the lines into beautiful, significant and meaningful forms.

Sullivan's work has been in many exhibits, including one artist exhibits at Crocker Art Gallery in Sacramento and the Atlantic Monthly Magazine Gallery in Boston. A memorial exhibit at the Artists Contemporary Gallery in 1985 established a Sheila Sullivan Scholarship Fund at the College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland and the Crocker Art Museum has a large Sullivan oil painting in its permanent collection.

The East Yolo Friends of the Library sponsors art exhibits at the Turner Library and for more information on the current exhibit, please phone 375-6465.

Brian Miller & Jeff Morazzini: a better way to shop for a house?

Home Port Realty was established in 1975 by longtime West Sacramento residents Roland and Jewell Hensley.

"My grandparents began it all," explained Jeff Morazzini, who along with his mother, Brenda, now own and operate Home Port Realty. "It's always been a family business and I think that is one of the reasons it's been so successful. Although some of the faces change from time to time, the goal is still the same -- to treat our customers honestly and fairly, the way my grandparents always did."

After graduating from Clarksburg's Delta High School and attending junior college for a couple of years, Jeff studied real estate principles for one year and then passed the State of California licensing exam.

"I began working at Home Port in the early 1990's," remembered Jeff, "and at that time, both the overall economy and the real estate market were just awful, and no one was very eager to run out and buy a house. Looking back on it, though, getting through those tough times taught me what it takes to do well in the real estate business and I'm actually grateful for all the hard lessons I had to learn back then. You don't do this kind of work unless you really love it, and I do."

A little over two years ago, in an effort to increase sales at Home Port and to also stay on top of all the new technologies which were beginning to impact the real estate business, Jeff decided to get serious about creating his own business website on the Internet.

"It took me quite a while to come up with just the right name for the website," said Jeff, "but once I hit on the idea of calling it WestSacHomes.com, everything else just kind of fell into place. With the help of Brian Miller, a friend of mine who is very talented in the area of graphic design, it wasn't long before I had it just the way I wanted it. Brian had some awesome ideas for how the website should look and work, and it's amazing how he turned all those ideas into reality. I give him one-hundred percent credit for making WestSacHomes.com what it is today."

"Jeff was full of ideas and had some very specific things he wanted the website to do," explained Brian, who has been creating websites for three years and been in the graphic design business for more than a decade, "and it was just a matter of taking the time to do it right. Jeff wanted it to be functional, attractive and, of course, effective. Most important of all, though, was that it had to be set so that Jeff could always keep it updated. And if you ask me, that's the best part of the website now, the fact that it's always so current."

"I had been used to publicizing our business in all the normal ways," explained Jeff, "through the newspaper, mailings, fliers, things like that, but the Internet is a completely new ball game. WestSacHomes.com is now averaging between 1,500 and 2,000 hits from potential customers every week, and we could never be reaching that many people using the old methods. When someone visits the site, they can see all the prices, addresses, and photos of just about every home that is for sale in the West Sacramento area. Plus the site has been set up so people will want to stay on-line and really take their time browsing, and they seem to be doing just that. Although it was fairly expensive in both time and money to get everything up and running, it's been more than worth it, and I'm more convinced than ever that this is the wave of the future in the real estate business."

Key Club plans visit to food kitchen

River City Key Club is back again this year. The Key Club is a group which does community service. They are sponsored by Kiwanis. This year's adviser Ms. Cain is full of ideas on how to make their club helpful to the community. " We plan to adopt an elementary class to go and help them out. We plan to visit a food kitchen and serve food to the hungry. We would also like to go to a nursing home and visit with the elderly," said Ms. Cain.

Key Club officers are president Monica Campos, vice president Guadalupe Gomez, secretary Liliana Reyes, and treasurer William Clayton.

Meetings are held every Tuesday morning at 7:15 in the Career Center. If you are interested in helping out your community, contact Ms. Cain in the office.

Math department did diagnostic testing

The math department distributed a diagnostic test in every math class early in October. The diagnostic test is a joint project with the University of California and California State University to see how well individual students understand the mathematical concept of algebra.

Some teachers will count the test scores as a grade. The benefit of the test is to determine a student's level of understanding of math. The test will not be used as a placement for a student's math class. A different test will be given in the spring to determine placement for next year.

Fireworks threat to student safety

By Olivia De Mars
Editor-in-Chief

"Students have been setting off fire works, fire crackers, and even firing cap guns," stated vice principal Ms. Doiron.

For the past two weeks fireworks have been set off in front of the gym and down the busiest hallway on campus.

"At first it was just the setting off of firecrackers," Ms. Doiron confirmed, "but now the incidents are more frequent and new objects are being used, like cherry bombs and cap guns."

There have been three reported incidents and one student has been injured. A cap gun went off near the ear of one student and she was reportedly in the nurse's office because of the continuous loud ringing in her ear.

In the other incidents the firecrackers have gone off at the feet of students. In one of those incidents a cherry bomb was thrown down the hall and "barely missed a young lady's head and landed at her feet," Ms. Doiron stated.

"Students don't realize that this is very dangerous," she added. "Students can be seriously injured. The loss of a finger or even a limb may result from the carelessness."

Ms. Doiron stressed that if anyone knows anything about the culprits to report them to Mr. Geivett, Mr. Watkins, or herself. If caught, the students face either suspension or expulsion.

Classes attempt to deter truancy

By Daniel Wilson
Staff Writer

Truancy! It has always been a problem here at River City High School. Recently the administration decided to hold classes to cut down on the truant and tardy students.

There are two different classes. One is the truancy class, held Tuesday and Thursdays from 1:50 to 3:30 p.m. The other is the life skills class held Tuesdays and Thursdays from 1:50 to 2:50 p.m. The truancy class and the life skills class are taken in a series of four sessions. The truancy class is for students who have major truancies on their records, and the life skills is for the more minor stuff like tardies and not so many unexcused absences. Greg King from Pacific Education Services teaches the classes.

Ms. Doiron, RC vice principal, explained that in the classes students must reflect on their choices and participate in games and activities that should teach them why coming to school is so important. These classes were not designed to just give kids a detention, but to actually teach them about their choices.

Ms. Doiron hopes that the classes will cut down on the truancies, tardies and ditching.

Engineering academy class attends California Fuel Cell Partnership opening

The California Fuel Cell Partnership opened their new headquarters facility on November 1 in West Sacramento. Over 400 people attended the event including Mrs. McAllister's third period Engineering Academy class.

The main reason they went was so that the students could learn about the fuel cell vehicles. They even rode to the Fuel Cell Partnership on Industrial Boulevard in West Sacramento on a fuel cell powered bus.

Sophomore Michael Gardner said, " The fuel cell powered bus was a more comfortable ride than a normal school bus."

"The moment we arrived, about 50 cameras surrounded us including channels 3, 4 and 13," said Mrs. McAllister.

They also received T-shirts, water bottles, and bumper stickers.

You may be wondering what a fuel cell is by now. Mrs. McAllister said, "A fuel cell is an alternative to internal combustion. It uses hydrogen and oxygen to power the engine without creating any pollution." She also said that the cars are very quiet, smooth and exciting.

The purpose of the event was to increase public awareness of fuel cell cars and buses and to increase public interest in using fuel cell vehicles. The California Fuel Cell Partnership is open to anyone who would like to visit.

" We had a great time, the food was great, and there were some really influential people there," Mrs. McAllister stated.

Tardy sweeps deny students an education says one senior

By Olivia De Mars
Editor-in-Chief

Sweeps. That's what the staff at River City calls the random hall checks after each tardy bell. The first week alone 202 students were caught in the sweeps and kept in the "holding tank," said Mr. Geivett.

According to Mr. Geivett this is nothing new. "We've done these 'sweeps' periodically over the past few years and now they will be conducted randomly after every passing period. Those students caught will suffer the consequences," he said.

If caught in the hallways after the tardy bell rings, students are escorted to the cafeteria and kept there for the remainder of the class period. They receive an unexcused absence for the class missed and no make-up work is given. If there was a test or a quiz that day they will receive a zero. If caught being tardy some might even get placed on garbage duty.

"We are seeing too many students in the halls after the tardy bell rings," commented Mr. Geivett. "Hopefully these hall sweeps will bring down the number of students being tardy to class and lingering in the halls."

On the other hand, some RC students feel that the sweeps are "inconsistent" and "depriving students of their education," according to Joy Kinney.

"I was going to P.E.," said Kaitlyn Bravo after being caught in the sweeps, "and I wasn't ditching."

"These sweeps are ridiculous," commented senior Joy Kinney. "At least students are going to class and not ditching. By not allowing the students to go to class they are denying them their education. When students are late to class, sometimes that can't be helped, and when they're late they are only missing a few minuets of class not the whole period."

Raider of the month helps peers in class

Staff Writer

November Raider of the month Inna Ryblkov came to the United States on December 3, 1999 with her two sisters, her mother and her father.

Inna came to the United States for a better life, but most important, she came for her relatives who already lived here.

Inna arrived speaking English very well. She learned British English in Russia and learned American English here.

Inna helps in her sheltered classes, math and English. She helps out her teacher a lot by explaining to the students who do not know English well in her classes.

She explains math problems and in English she helps them answer the questions that they do not understand.

Her plans in the future are to attend Fresno Pacific University. She wants to major in teaching or business.

After college Inna plans on having a great job and she wants to get married and have a family. She would also like to return to Russia for a visit.

Inna was nominated for student of the month because she helps out her fellow classmates in the classroom.

November Raider Estevan Cisneros has ambitious goals

By Esthela Duran
Staff Writer

"Ten years ago, I was eight years old. I wasn't even thinking about the future. All I was worried about was having fun and being a troublemaker. I was a brat on the run," said November Raider of the Month Estevan Cisneros when asked what he thought his life was going to be like ten years ago. At age 18, Estevan lives each day to the fullest and always tries to make the best out of it since life is what he is the most thankful for. "Each morning as I wake up I am thankful for being alive. Every night when one goes to sleep we never know if we will see the next day," he said

Estevan has grown up looking up to his two older brothers Raul and Ralph. "My oldest brother is in the US Navy and the second to the oldest is an electrician," he said

On a typical weekday Estevan's activities include waking up, going to school, going home, going to work, taking time for self, and going to sleep. On a typical weekend they are waking up, bumming around the house for a while, taking his parents out to eat, working, time for himself, and finally after a fun yet tiring day he gets some sleep. Actually, one of his favorite activities is playing soccer with his eight-year-old brother.

" For the rest of the school year as a senior I am going to make the best out of it. Work hard and keep up with everyone else," said

170 students are in Renaissance this semester. Of course, none of them are freshmen. Freshmen cannot apply for membership in Renaissance until the second semester. Renaissance is a program where you can win prizes and just have fun. The purpose of Renaissance is to praise those students who work hard and keep up the good work. To be a member of this program you must have good grades, good attendance and good behavior.

Early in September Renaissance held a t-shirt design contest. Marina Vyalkov won $25 in cash, a Big Dog t-shirt and got her drawing printed on the Renaissance t-shirt.

There are a few upcoming plans for Renaissance. They gave out Snickers bars for Thanksgiving, finals care packages will be handed out, and there will be some drawings as well. Finals

After-Thanksgiving sales lure hundreds of shoppers

By Shalini Sumeshwar
Staff Writer

Days before Thanksgiving the commotion began... SALE, SALE, SALE. Commercials and newspaper ads all advertised the famous "After-Thanksgiving Sale." Some lasted for the entire weekend, but many were for no longer than five early morning hours, ensuring long lines and eager customers. When the big shopping day arrives one can only set the alarm clock and hope that the stomach full of turkey from the previous night bids them to get up.

On the biggest shopping day of the year at 9:00 am, instead of being in, I am one of the seemingly hundreds outside of Arden Fair Mall waiting for a parking space. Luckily, we didn't have to park in the Cal Expo parking to be shuttled over. When we entered the mall we could feel the excitement of the day after Thanksgiving. People were walking back to front, arms filled with bags, already tired, yet each face seemed bright and eager, no one quite ready to go home.

The first store we entered wasn't too crowded. I was forced to stand in their line for the register while my shop-a-holic sister went through the racks. But this turned out to be a good thing because as we were leaving the line began to trickle out the door. At the next store all you could see was "30% off", "50% off", "Buy 1 get the 2nd half off." I guess the signs had a hidden meaning of "splurge," because one woman spent $647.00 on little more than an outfit, and that was at half off.

Then it was on to Florin Mall. It was the first time I had seen the parking lot of the one-story mall full. The aisles were bustling with racial diversity. If one took a picture of this group you could literally call it "A Picture of America."

Downtown Plaza was the same story. Even the food court had empty seats because of people who would rather shop than eat. Finally the stores began to close. Everyone traveled to the front of the mall to the giant guitar (Hard Rock Café).

At 7:00 sharp the huge tree was lit, and the exhausted faces of shoppers lit up, ready to go home and eat leftover turkey.

Smoke bombs, cherry bombs, stink bombs,and firecrackers being set off in the main hallway here at River CIty has become a common occurrence. Review staffers voiced common opinions this month on the topic.

Explosives harmful and illegal

Cherry bombs, smoke bombs, fire crackers, stink bombs? Like. . .Whoa! Who can be crazy enough to bring explosive devices to our River City campus? What's more, who can be sly enough to bring those things, ignite them, and not get caught? Another I have for this or these individuals is "WHY?" What is the purpose of all this? Is this supposed to be a sort of practical joke? If it is, then where's the humor? Am I the only one not laughing? So many questions but not enough answers.

The person or persons going around lighting these harmful explosives might be thinking that they aren't harmful at all. After having more than one person go into the main office complaining about hearing trouble after having a fire cracker go off next to her ear, and having an injured foot after having a cherry bomb explode near her foot, I'd say that these illegal fireworks are very harmful.

The culprits probably don't even know that they are now facing severe consequences, such as being suspended or possible expulsion. This can indeed be considered criminal behavior and must, in fact, be taken seriously. I loathe those who believe that this is acceptable behavior coming from high schools students, River City high school students at that.

By Jesus Rivera

Explosions should not be happening

When students walk in the hallways they don't expect cherry bombs bursting right in their faces. At River City some immature students have been placing cherry bombs around the school campus. The students whoa re doing this think this is a practical joke, but it's not, because someone can get hurt seriously. For example, if a cherry bomb goes into someone's eye this person will not be able to see.

These students don't realize how dangerous cherry bombs are. The questions is, why would someone want to put cherry bombs around the school campus, just to have fun? If the school staff does find these students who have been doing this, they need to expel them for trying to hurt other students. I think this issue is very stupid and this shouldn't even be happening.

By Manorma Umaria

Students should feel safe

Just what is in the minds of these individuals that light cherry bombs? Just what pleasure do they receive by doing this? They need to rise from their immaturity to a level of maturity suitable for high school.

If these individuals continue to pursue this hobby, they will only end up like the unibomber and facing severe consequences.

If they want a career making such devices why not go to college and take an electronics class? Chemistry? They can make money and still remain legal.

So tell me, are these bombs supposed to be funny? I must have missed the joke!

Some people do not understand just how dangerous these nefarious explosive devices really are.

Students should feels safe coming to school and not afraid as they enter the school campus.

I'm sure these "bombers" never meant to hurt anyone. The fact remains that someone can get hurt and these devices are illegal!!!

Media exploits Election 2000

By Ivy Branaman
Features Editor

On Election night 2000, I anxiously watched CNN awaiting the announcement of our nation's elected leader. First, Gore had Florida and was most likely going to win. Then, Bush had won for sure. The Sacramento Bee was so sure of his victory that they published papers with the headline "Bush wins it." Within a few short hours, broadcasters retracted Bush's alleged win and declared that the race was too close to call.

Throughout the next week reporters swarmed the key electoral state, Florida, and coverage of the elections was incessant. The possible outcomes were analyzed each day, and each day the possible outcomes changed. Lawsuits were filed by Gore and Bush. The outcome of those lawsuits interrupted regularly scheduled programming. News stations even aired stories that analyzed the tumultuous election's effect on the stock market.

At first, I kept a close watch on the historical election. A former Gore fanatic, I was incredibly disappointed when the two candidates came out as the two deceptive, bickering politicians they really are. It all became one complicated issue that news stations and news papers perpetually covered. The news became a broken record.

Many people have pointed fingers at who is to blame for this drawn out election. Some say our founding fathers created a disproportional electoral system; others say people should accept the votes and not ask for recounts. I say the media exploited it.

This is the same media that perpetually both pursued and covered the Monica Lewinsky scandal for nearly a year. This year, they exploited a too-close-to-acall election. Coverage and knowledge of the events regarding the elections for our nation's leader is necessary. Analyzing it at every angle, on every newscast, is not.

In their effort to gain ratings, and sell copies they forgot about integrity. The media should tell us what we need to know and what we want to know. We needed to know what was going on with the re-counts in Florida. We didn't want to know every painstaking detail and analysis.

The Sacramento Bee sank to a new low on November 24 when they published three photos of someone examining ballots. Not only were the photos unnecessary but humorous. Why on earth would anyone want or need to see someone examining a ballot with a magnifying glass?

I care about who will be our nation's leader. I don't care to hear about it every time I turn on the news. I care more about the fact that America's media pursues and perpetually covers frivolous stories. I am not naïve enough to believe that they will change. They won't. After all, the purpose of newspapers and news shows is to sell papers and get ratings and they are doing just that.

ASB president Sara Penrod to be radio psychologist

By Olivia De Mars
Editor-in-Chief

"It sucks being the only child," asserted Sara Penrod, looking back on her childhood. "I hated it and it was a very lonely way to grow up." Not only did Sara have a lonely child hood with no little brothers or sisters to play with, she was forced to converse with adults instead of other little children. "I used to read a lot when I was little," explained Sara. "In many ways I think reading helped me mature a lot faster than other kids my age did."

This maturity sparked leadership and, inspired by Tony Venditti her junior year, Sara embarked on her first year of involvement in the leadership class. "I didn't know how much I was going to like it," explained Sara. "However, when I got involved with the homecoming activities, I fell in love with it and knew that I wanted to be ASB president."

Sara said that she saw so much potential in River City to do many great things and that she wanted to be in a position to encourage those things. The following year Sara ran unopposed for ASB president and was awarded the position.

Not only is Sara very occupied with the work of being RC's student body president, she is very active with the Syncopating Sea Monkeys, River City's jazz band. Sara is one of the lead vocalists for the band, and won the title of Vocalist of the Year for Jazz Band from the music department in 1999 and then again in 2000. "I love performing," Sara said, "especially singing."

Sara Penrod

Sara enjoys performing so much that she performed in Juvie, the drama department's recent production. "I played the character of a drug addict," said Sara. Throughout the play she wandered about the stage aimlessly flipping her hair, and rubbing the bruises on her arms; she was constantly moving. Sara has also performed in many other River City plays, including Our Town and A Few Good Men in which she played the role of Joanne Galloway.

"I had a lot of fun playing the character of Joanne," said Sara. "It was my first grown up role and it is an experience that I will never forget."

Sara has high hopes of one day having her own talk show. She anticipates attending U.C. Berkeley where she hopes to double major in psychology and mass communications. "I'd like to be a mix between Adam Carolla and Dr. Drew from the Love Line," Sara explained. "They are so funny and sarcastic that I would like to posses the characteristics of both of them."

Sara is also a high school reporter for the radio station 107.9 The End. "I report on our school and everything interesting that we are doing for that week," said Sara. Her reports are aired every Thursday morning at 7:45.

On top of her news reporting, Sara is currently trying to learn how to speak the German language in preparation for a trip to Germany. "I am going to Germany next summer to see where my opa [grandfather] lived. He died of lung cancer when I was a sophomore and it really affected me, so now I want to go see what he saw when he was growing up," said Sara.

Sara will travel around Germany with her cousin and travel to other countries like Italy.

Finally every night when Sara has completed her many tasks for that day, you can find her cuddled up on the couch watching Late Night with Conan O'Brien. "I have an obsession with him," admitted Sara, "He is the wittiest, sexiest, most all-around-irresistible person on t.v."

RC students make own web pages

By Ivy Branaman
Features Editor

The internet has long been a source of communication and advertising. Now, it seems students are making their mark on the world wide web. River City students are creating web sites to inform or to just have fun.

Zech Castner, a senior at River City, has been designing web sites for five years.

"Gene Roddenberry, the creator of Star Trek had the most optimistic view of the future," he commented on his self-declared Star Trekkie status. It is fitting, then, that two of his four web sites are role playing Star Trek games.

> "People I talk to online can go to my profile and click on the link on the bottom of it. It [the web page] has what I look like, my hobbies and sites I visit. People go there to find out about me."
> ~ Megan Stockdale

"You create a character using dice. The dice, or fate, determine the character's dexteritiy, strength, and other characteristics," explained Zech of the role playing game he calls "Starbase Nox." The game, located at www.geocities.com/starbasenox/, has a sister website at www.geocites.com/thirdfleet/.

Depending upon the complexity of the site, Zech says, it can take a few hours or a few months to build. He also maintains two websites that are exclusively about him. Although he doesn't plan on a career in web design, he does look forward to a career that is somehow computer-related.

Sarn Ta Saejo does not plan on a career in computers or web design. His interest isn't in web design but in his culture. Born in Thailand, Sarn Ta emigrated to America when he was eight years old. His website, www.mien2mien.cjb.net, offers information about Mien culture.

"Most people don't know what it's about. I put it there to inform," he said. The web site presents pictures of Mien weddings and the traditional clothing worn by the women. It also offers detailed descriptions of Mien customs such as courtship, funeral ceremonies, child naming and more. As he intended, his web site is a wealth of information on Mien culture.

As co-founder and president of the Asian Culture Club, Sarn Ta plans on building a website for the club as well.

Some students aren't as ambitious as Zech and Sarn Ta. They create web pages instead of web sites.

Megan Stockdale, a sophomore, explained what a web page is. "People I talk to online can go to my profile and click on the link at the bottom of it. It [the web page] has what I look like, my hobbies and sites I visit. People go there to find out about me," she explained. Megan created the web page six months ago and updates it about every month.

Whether RC students are creating web sites that offer role playing games, information on their culture or information about themselves, they are doing it.

Even if RC students aren't yet changing the world, they are contributing to the cultural phenomenon of the internet.

Zech Castner's explanation for why he does it was put so sim-

Mrs. Pressly new coach

P.E. teacher played basketball at Merced H.S. and at University of San Francisco when younger.

By Manorma Umaria
Staff Writer

Joy Boyenga Pressly, also known as a River City physical education teacher and girls freshman basketball coach, is new at River City this year. She said she became a P.E teacher because her father was a physical education teacher, and she also enjoyed athletics and being in the outdoors.

It took a lot for Mrs. Pressly to become a teacher. She spent four years getting her undergraduate degree, two years in a masters program, and one and a half years earning her teaching credential.

During her many years of college she had a tough time in chemistry class. "Chemistry class was the hardest class for me in high school," said Mrs. Pressly. "I had to study extra hard to do well," she stated.

Mrs. Pressly is also coaching the girls freshman basketball team. She herself played basketball at Merced High School and then played in college for University of San Francisco.

Elizabeth is her seventeen-month-old daughter. Asked what she has experienced as a P.E teacher, she responded, "I enjoy watching my students learn and improve in their activities and also in their fitness levels." Mrs. Pressly said she does plan on staying here for a while.

Superstition or fallacy?

Some people spill salt and think nothing of it. Others spill salt and think they are doomed. Crazy superstitions or portents of the future?

By Esthela Duran
Staff Writer

Have you ever had a bad dream? Or suddenly you wake up and it's Friday the 13th? Or maybe you accidentally spill the salt on the dinner table. What do you do?

Superstition. Is it real or is it coincidence? There is a saying that if you or someone else sweeps your feet while sweeping you will not get married."

"My mom has accidentally swept my feet," said sophomore Ruby Guzman. "Yeah, I am superstitious and, yes, I do believe in this."

"My friend was picking up the kitchen one time and she accidentally swept her mom's feet onetime and her mom started flipping out on her. Since that day I thought it was true since I saw how serious her mom was about this," said sophomore TammyWattley.

Some superstitions began a long time ago. For example, spilling the salt was said to be bad luck since Judas supposedly spilled the salt during the last supper.

Other superstitious beliefs such as that black cats are evil and walking under a ladder is bad luck are examples of myths that have been carried on throughout years.

The belief that black cats are evil comes from ancient Egypt where there was a goddess and once Christianity came along Christians believed that all other religions should be banished, so in search for this goddess who was a black cat they started killing black cats.

Then came a lady who cared for these animals and tried to save them and people believed that she was a witch and black cats were part of evil.

Have you ever knocked on wood before? Well, supposedly every time someone says something that they don't want to happen they need to knock on wood for the evil spirits not to act upon it.

As you can see, superstition is all in your own personal beliefs. It can be real or it could all be fake, and when things occur it could just be coincidence.

Explosions occur in Ms. Tuttle's science class

By Daniel Wilson
Staff Writer

Boom! Boom! Shots fired. At least that was what one of the physical education teachers in fifth period thought had happened recently when Ms. Tuttle's sophomore biology and chemistry classes experienced a very loud, dramatic experiment that involved gasses like oxygen, a spark plug and a foam ball.

The experiment happened as follows. A foam ball was put into one end of a fairly long steel pipe with a spark plug at the other end (along with some gasses-- oxygen, and carbon dioxide-- that were inside the tube). She told her students to move out of the middle of the classroom so the foam ball would not hit them.

Ms. Tuttle then sparked the plug, which ignited the gasses and caused the foam ball to fly at high speed to the back of the classroom. This explosion caused a loud, and I mean loud, sound like a gunshot.

Ms. Tuttle suggested that the class might like to see the experiment again, and her students shouted, "Yes!"

So, she sparked the plug again but nothing happened. The reason? There was no oxygen. Ms. Tuttle added some oxygen and boom!

DeMarco Payne, another Review staff member, was standing a little too close to the middle of the line of fire and was hit in the stomach with the foam ball.

Don't worry, though. At last report, De Marco was all right!

Mythology has more to it than The Odyssey

By Vanesa Rosales
Staff Writer

Mythology. When you think of this word, you probably think of Greek mythology, like The Odyssey with characters such as Zeus and Penelope and Cyclops. But every culture has its mythology, organized collections of stories (myths) by which we explain our beliefs and our history. Similar myths exist in every culture. The characters are different and so are the plots, but the themes are fairly common.

Mythology is actually a part of modern society. Companies, groups and corporations take their names, themes, or logos from ancient mythology. Ajax the popular cleanser is also a Greek warrior in the Trojan War who "cleaned up" in battle. The Aurora, a luxury car, is also a Roman name for Eros, goddess of the dawn. The delicious candy bar Mars in myth is a Roman name for Aries, god of war. Nike, the most popular shoe company, took the name from a winged goddess of victory, who can run and fly at great speeds.

Movies, schools and people's names also are taken from Greek mythology, including Hercules and Xena (the popular TV shows), The Titans of California State University-Fullerton and names such as Penelope (wife of Odysseus).

> Ajax, the popular cleanser, is also a Greek warrior in the Trojar War who "cleaned up" in battle.

Astronomy is greatly influenced by mythology. Most of the planets are named after characters from mythology such as Mars the Roman god of war and the plant fourth from the sun, Mercury, Roman god of trade and theft, and the planet nearest the sun, and Pluto, Roman god of the underworld, the planet farthest from the sun.

Many common expressions have been taken from mythology: Achilles' heel, a vulnerable point from the greatest warrior at Troy, and Midas touch, an uncanny ability for making money from King Midas who was given the power to turn everything he touched into gold.

As you can see, mythology is not only old literature and myths. It has had a great effect on modern society. Without mythology we wouldn't have the different and interesting names and logos of businesses. When you're sitting down on a lazy Sunday evening watching Hercules and Xena, remember the story lines are taken from mythology.

Three RC wrestlers place at Vanden Novice Tournament

By Olivia De Mars
Editor-in-Chief

What do you get when you cross a chain saw with a wolverine? If you guessed a River City wrestler, you are right. The River City apprentice wrestlers ventured to Vanden High School November 22 to test their skills in the ancient art of wrestling. The Vanden Vikings hosted the Golden Empire League Novice Wrestling Tournament where three Raiders captured medals in three weight divisions.

The Raiders traveled to Vacaville bringing a team of seven competitors, who for the first time tested their new-found skills on the mat. If you're thinking this is the same type of wrestling you see on television, well it's not. In this sport there is no hitting with chairs, jumping off ropes, or ripping of the eyes; however, there are such moves as cross-facing, and the famous half-nelson. They also wear little outfits called singlets which look like a pair of tights.

Beginner wrestlers Kurt Beaudikofer, 103 lbs.; Antonio Castro, 130 lbs.; Alex Lokteff 152 lbs.; John Frank, 152 lbs.; Steve Engle, 160 lbs.; Jeff Hope, 189 lbs.; and Michael De Mars, 209 lbs. made up the River City Novice team.

Kurt, Alex, and Steve lost all of their matches, but "the most important thing is to gain experience," said Coach Ferris, "because new wrestlers never know what the sport is really like until they are involved in their first match. Each of them displayed signs of improvement and will only get better as the season progresses."

> In every one of [Antonio's] matches the crowd was brought to their feet by his technique in dropping his opponents with the back-heel trip.

Antonio Castro took fourth place in his weight division, winning two of his four matches. In every one of his matches the crowed was brought to their feet by his technique in dropping his opponents with the back-heel trip. In his final match Antonio met with a Lincoln senior, and lost by disqualification for being too rough.

Jeff Hope brought home the bronze medal in his division, showing a strong first and second round in each of his matches.

John Frank started the tournament by losing his beard (the referees made him shave off his goatee), but came back fighting, winning the silver medal in his weight class.

Michael De Mars started his season winning both of his matches by pinning his opponents in the first and second rounds. Michael was crowned champion of his division, and took home the gold medal.

"Our team made a good showing," said Coach Miller, "but we have a lot to work on."

According to both coaches, this years' promising novice wrestlers include Antonio Castro, Michael De Mars, and Jeff Hope.

The next wrestling tournament will be held Saturday, Dec. 2 at Amador High School at 9 a.m.

Freshman football team takes league

By Olivia De Mars

The freshman football team has done it again! They have brought home the Golden Empire League freshman football championship. This championship will be the second in a row for the River City Raiders.

> The deciding game came November 2 when the only thing that stood between River City and another championship was the Lincoln Zebras.

The deciding game came November 2 when the only thing that stood between River City and another championship was the Lincoln Zebras.

The game was a rout from the start. Seconds before the first half ended the Raiders were up 12-0, when Coach Johnson, looking to score, called in the tight-end screen left pass. The ball was throw to Louis Duarte who scored on a 45-yard run down the sideline to make the score 18-0. On the two-point conversion attempt, the Raiders ran to the left scoring once again to make the score 20-0 at the half.

"We've worked all year on the screen plays," said Coach Johnson as he was walking to the boys' locker room. "We use them when we need the first down, or want to score, and the offense ran the play how it was designed to be run, and we scored."

After the half, the mighty Raiders scored three more times and kicked one good field goal to make the final score 39-0, ending in a victory for the River City Raiders.

Congratulations to our River City freshman football team for bring home another championship.

Varsity football ends 2-3

By Jennifer Gabourie
Sports Writer

The varsity football team ended their season with a loss of 30-6 against Lincoln. "We played our hearts out," said Marc Magdeleno, "and gave everything we had to beat Lincoln, but it just wasn't enough."

Their overall record was 4-5-1. In league they were 2-3. "Five of our losses were against playoff teams [Vanden, Lincoln, Calaveras, Marysville, and Center.] In order to become a winning program, you have to beat those kinds of teams," said Coach McIntyre. "The players worked very hard this year and did play good football at times. We did not play consistently good football."

Some players felt that it just slipped away from them, but that it was in their reach. "We were the underdogs, but we came up on top on some of the games that people thought we wouldn't, and Dixon was one of those games," said Zafar Niazi.

Coach King has plans for team

By Ivy Branaman
Features Editor

"The girls have been far more receptive [than boys] to simple techniques and fundamentals of the game," stated varsity girls basketball coach Jaime King. Coach King has previously only coached boys teams; he is determined to create a competitive team and a daily improving team.

The girls he will work with to do this are Violet Arch, Leanne Briggs, Yvonne Brown, Beverly Enos, Jennifer Gabourie, Nancy Hernandez, Crystal Manning, Veronica Maldonado, Virginia Mendez, Leanna McBride, and Kelsey West.

The team will play their first game November 30 at Sacramento Waldorf. They are playing a tournament against Freemont Christian.

"There's not many of us but we can work together to win," team member Kelsey West, a junior, remarked.

The team will be working together on and off the field. Coach King plans to hold car washes to raise money for the team. "We're going to coach little kids [basketball]," Coach King commented. For Christmas, he is planning on the team volunteering in a soup kitchen.

However, before the practices, games, fundraisers, and charity work the team members need to maintain a 2.0 grade point average.

Coach King has foreseen the possibility of losing some of their few players to low grades. Study sessions are held after school for the girls to work on their homework before practice.

"The purpose of the study session is to say that without grades, basketball means nothing. In terms of the boys last year, it did help. We didn't lose anyone on the team last year because of grades," Coach King proudly stated.

J.V. football team takes second in league play

By Olivia De Mars
Editor-in-Chief

The j.v. football team was high-spirited after their game against the Lincoln Zebras. However, they weren't all too excited before the half.

The Zebras capitalized on a trick play and scored a two-point conversion to put them ahead 8-0, seconds before the half.

The second half belonged to the Raiders who switched up to play power football with a three-back offense. After a 70-yard drive the Raiders made a touchdown, making the score 8-6, Lincoln. To tie up the game the Raiders went for a two-point conversion, but failed.

The Raiders kicked off to the thundering herd of Zebras, but the defense stopped their drive and corralled the offense, forcing them to punt.

The offense once again made another unstoppable drive ending with a touchdown to make the score 12-8, Raiders. Going for the two-point conversion with Tony Molina, the Raiders scored, making the final score 14-8, Raiders.

"If this j.v. team stays together I think that they will win a lot of games," said Coach Watkins.

The Raiders took second in league and Coach Watkins attributed the success of the season to the great players and coaching staff, which included defensive line coordinator Gabe Jimenez.

RC j.v. girls are devoted

By Beverly Enos
Sports Writer

Most of the freshman girls from last year's j.v season are returning this year. The team is made up of all sophomores: Yaminah Bailey, Moe Billy, Amanda Carriker, Jessica Cervantes, Heather Fristoe, Rachel Gibbs, Katie Koell, Isabel Mendez, Veronica Novinsky, Versha Patel, Viqui Peralta, Nai Saelee, Melinda Verdeuzco and Ashley Weldon.

Head Coach Shawn King, coaching the Lady Raiders for his second year, said "Our only goal will be to make our team's strengths and eliminate our weaknesses. The key to our team is our chemistry!"

Some of the hardest teams that they need to beat are "Dixon and Colfax," said Coach King. He said the team is going to have a great year because they are devoted to the sport and willing to work hard.

Varsity boys basketball hopes to play at Arco Arena

Jennifer Gabourie

The varsity boys basketball team consists of fourteen players: one sophomore, seven juniors, and six seniors. The players are Jason DeMars, David Garcia, Jon Daniel, Erik Rodriguez, Damon Dosty, Jared Leisure, Francisco Rodriguez, Marc Magdeleno, Yasser Salman, Ronson Mumui, Zafar Niazi, Shams Maazouddin, Robert Rodriquez, and Roy Butz. Jon West coaches the guys.

Coach West would like to win league and get back to the playoffs. "Our key goal this year is rebounding. If we rebound then we should win," said Coach West.

The team feels that the "green teams" are their biggest challenge. Those teams that wear the green jerseys include Vanden, Colfax, Mesa Verde, and Dixon. Asked how they will defeat these teams, Mr. West said, " We have to be as strong as we can, and we have to muscle the ball."

All the players have goals that they would like to achieve. "I would like us to be able to put a banner on the gym wall," said Jared Leisure.

"I would like us to win more than five games," said Jon Daniel," and make it to Arco Arena."

The team feels strongly that they will go far this season. " We have good size and depth on the bench. We should be fun to watch," stated Mr. West.

The team's first game is November 29 at the Argonaut Tournament. Their first home game is not till December 12, against Christian Brothers.

News-Ledger Editorial:

West Sacramento: a different city from two years ago

Christopher Cabaldon, possibly the only West Sacramentan to own a three-piece suit, is no longer mayor of West Sacramento.

But a lot changed in the two years he held that post, and most of it was good. The city is in a better position for its future because Cabaldon was the right person in the right post at the right time. As other members of the council noted as he passed over the gavel Monday night, it is primarily Cabaldon's work in the greater Sacramento region that helped "shift the paradigm" here in West Sacramento. With his ties to others in state government and surrounding local governments, and his vision of regional cooperation, Cabaldon made a difference. He helped weave West Sacramento into a more honored place in the Sacramento region's fabric.

The most visible result of that difference is the baseball stadium. Cabaldon was one of several key players in putting together the unprecedented deal in which Sacramento County agreed to guarantee most of the bonds issued to pay for Raley Field -- here in Yolo County.

The door is now open for other deals of mutual benefit.

And, as retiring city councilman Greg Potnick recently said, regional cooperation is now a necessity. It is simply our only way of dealing with problems such as smog, traffic congestion and urban sprawl. So, whether we want to or not, we might as well learn how to get good at regional planning. With Cabaldon's help, we just got better.

Will he seek higher office? Does "Assemblyman Cabaldon" have a nice ring to it?

For the answers to these and other questions, we'll just have to stay tuned.

But if you run into Christopher Cabaldon on the street, give him a pat on the back for a historic job as West Sacramento mayor.

Just don't call him "Chris."

The venerable Boy Scout organization has just announced a planned local speech to defend their adherence to "the values this country was built upon." The Scouts are referring to the organization's ongoing battle over its refusal to allow members or leaders who are homosexual.

Likewise, a West Sacramento pastor recently attacked the existence of a student club at River City High School formed to promote tolerance and understanding of homosexuals. The pastor backed up his criticism with Bible quotes and with irrational claims by a group called the Traditional Values Coalition ("homosexuals cannot reproduce, so they recruit other parents' children").

But the thing is this:

"Traditional values," or the values this country was "built upon," aren't automatically values worth keeping. The Founding Fathers had many wonderful ideas, but their "traditional values" included slavery and the subjugation of women. These are also values you can find justification for in the Bible.

You have every right to keep your values because they are "traditional," or because you can justify them with Bible quotes. Please don't, however, try to roll back the clock for the rest of us in an effort to recapture some imagined, glorious past filled with "traditional values." The rest of us may prefer values that make sense. We may prefer to keep the old values worth keeping – and to ditch the ones that aren't.

Hanging up on 911 calls

From Lt. Ray Hensley
West Sac. Police Department

Note: This press release is another in a series designed to inform citizens of our community of issues that have been brought to the attention of the West Sacramento Police Department.

Lt. Ray Hensley

I would like to address the Police Department's response to hang-up 911 calls. The 911 system is an excellent way to get an immediate response from fire personnel, emergency medical aid or a police officer. In most cases, the system works very well and the needed attention is given by the appropriate agency. I want to discuss what happens when the 911 call is a hang-up call. When that occurs, the call goes to Yolo County Dispatch Center in Woodland. The dispatch is then tasked with how to handle that call. The dispatcher will attempt to call the number back and will ask questions designed to ascertain what type of aid is needed; fire personnel, ambulance personnel, or the police. If the dispatcher has any question as to the conditions at the residence, a police officer is dispatched. Some of the indicators are: 1) a male voice in an agitated condition states that everything is alright; 2) a female who is less than convincing stating that everything is alright, or 3) children with no adult nearby to speak on the phone. When police officers respond they are challenged with assessing the welfare of all residents. Although each situation is different, the questions to be answered are: 1) the number of people in the residence; 2) are children present; 3) is there a female present; 4) is anyone upset or agitated; 5) are there signs of a struggle; 6) are there signs of injury to any of the residents.

The number one question from the public is, under any of those circumstances, can an officer come into my house to search. Police officers must do everything in their power to ensure that all persons are safe. They can enter the residence, interview the fe-

'Officer Inflatable'

I was delighted this morning on my way to work to see Officer Inflatable on duty in her patrol car on Jefferson Boulevard. How I have missed her for the past few weeks! I have come to like her friendly faithfulness (she always smiles) and her devotion to duty (she watches out for us without blinking).

When she disappeared from our street I wondered if perhaps she had come under too much pressure and had blown her job. Seeing her again, however, makes me think that the department decided that, rather than tie her to one post, to let her float around town. I hope so, because to lose your job can be really deflating. I'm glad her bubble hasn't been burst in such a way.

I'll bet she has to have a pretty tough skin to be a good officer, but she might be kind of a softy in some ways. At any rate, it probably wouldn't be smart to needle her about something like that.

Anyway, it's a gas knowing she is still on the job. I'll bet folks are proud of her. Especially her Pop.

(EDITOR'S NOTE: just in case you don't 'get it,' Mr. Leach is referring to a blow-up doll that performs police duty in West Sacramento. The uniformed doll sits in a patrol car on local streets and helps deter speeders. You may recall her picture in the News-Ledger a few weeks ago: she is that rare police office made more of donut holes than donuts. . .)

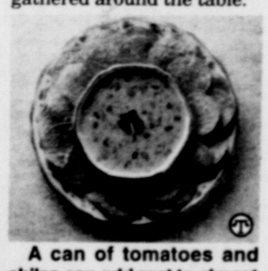
Family-Friendly Meals: Add A Can

(NAPS)—"Cooking and entertaining doesn't have to be difficult or time consuming," says culinary and lifestyle expert B. Smith. "My favorite meals are quick and easy to prepare, use a limited amount of ingredients, look and taste terrific and allow me to spend plenty of time with the friends and family gathered around the table."



A can of tomatoes and chiles can add zest to almost any dish.

Smith suggests adding a can of Ro*tel Diced Tomatoes and Green Chiles to hamburgers, macaroni and cheese and scrambled eggs for fast and flavorful meals. When mixed with melted and processed cheese, it can make for a marvelous dip.

"I love the fresh zesty taste, the natural spices and the ease of simply adding a can to whatever I make," she explains. "The flavor is as fresh as the tomatoes from my garden—with no chopping and nothing to clean up."

been more busy and although Jeff sees WestSacHomes.com as an important part of that growth, he says most of the credit for Home Port's continuing success goes to its employees.

"In addition to my mother, who is extremely good at what she does, "said Jeff, "we have a number of other fine agents, including Raul DeAnda, Eric Ladd and Paul Hensley. Plus Christy Phipps is the best escrow coordinator a real estate business could hope to have and she is just awesome. In addition to what the new website is doing for us, we get a lot of repeat business at Home Port Realty, and I think that is because the people who work here have always treated our customers right the first time they bought or sold a house through us. We're dedicated to doing business in a caring, professional way, and I hope any of your readers who are thinking of selling or buying a home in the near future will give us a call at 372-5933 or visit the new website at www.WestSacHomes.com."
